The hearing will be held on habeas corpus proceedings filed on behalf of Dr. Frank Sofge, nmate of the federal penitentiary here serving time after conviction on narcotic charge.

Hooper Alexander and former Gov ernor Thomas W. Hardwick will represent Sofge at the hearing.

The habens corpus petition, asking that Warden John W. Snook, of the rison, be required to produce Sofge has been filed by Mr. Alexander and Saturday morning has been set as the date for hearing.

This test case is the result of a funds to push a test case on the anti-narcotic law through the federal courts. They took this action following a ruling of Associate Justice McReynolds, of the United States sueme court, in which he is quoted as "challenging" a test case on the constitutionality of the narcotic law efore the supreme bench.

It is understood that argument ounsel for Sofge will be based on the fact that the federal anti-narcotic aet is unconstitutional because it invades the police powers of the states and violates rights of the individual in making him subject to conviction merely for possessing the outlawed drugs, regardless of whether it is shown that he has sold them. There is no parallel between the fore, I do not wish to fire upon another Pole."

Quarreled Over Coup.

The duel was the sequence of a quarrel over Marshal Pilsudski's recent coup d'etat. The two men had words, and Count Skrzynski issued a challenge. Every effort was made to prevent the meeting but a mutual court of arbitration ruled that the challenge, was issued "in strict accordance with the code of hone."

Thereupon preparations were carried through to bring the opponents face to face.

After the duel the court of honor officially declared that the dispute had been settled according to "all the rules of honor, each party having obtained satisfaction in the manner he saw fit."

Count Skrzynski and General Szeptycki are related by blood, and the former premier has the reputation of being a dead shot. He explained to being a dead shot. He explained to frends another angle of his withholding his fire, saying: "I don't know how to miss, and I did not want to kill a man in whose veins flow the blood of my forefathers."

Some fears are entertained that the duel, in which the men were not reconciled, might have the effect of dividing the army into rival factions, and that other duels may follow.

The American Pullman car as used by this and other great trunk lines, affords not only comfortable and clean beds, but adequate toilet facilities, which are not to be found even on the finest trains in Europe. Between the principal American cities and the points of interest there are many railroads operating many fast trains daily and Sunday. the dining-car service is done away with—making it necessary for travel-lers to get off even the best trains at stations and eat at lunch counters.

While some of the Continental trains run faster per mile than American trains, their through schedules are on the whole very much slower. For instance, between Cincinnati, Ohio and Mobile, Alabama—a distance of 781.3 miles—the Pan-Americian requires but 20 hours, 33 minutes; whereas, between Nice and Paris—a distance of but 675 miles (106 miles shorter than between Cincinnati and Mobile)—23 hours, 25 minutes is required on their fastest trains. Think of this again! In America, 781 miles in 20 hours and a half—in France, 675 miles in 23 hours and a half.

Sanders McDaniel, son of ex-Governor Henry McDaniel, a graduate of the university with the class of 1886, one of those holding reunions here today, delivered the annual oration.

The subject of his address was "This Growing and Changing Government," which topic he discussed at length, going into various prophesies made by historians during the early life of the republic, the constitution and its founders and the various amendments and branches of government that the growing needs of the country have evolved.

Mr. McDaniel quoted De Tocqueville's "Democracy in America," where the historian of may recover Sanders McDaniel, son of ex-Gov ville's "Democracy in America," where the historian of many years ago prophesied that the federal government, in connection with its own power and that of the states, would grow weaker and weaker and that that its sovereignty would be in danger. Broader Government.

Broader Government.

Instead of this being true, it was pointed out by Mr. McDaniel that the very opposite is true in that the union became more and more secure as time passed. He cited the fact that we have classes of people, individuals and groups, who decry the state government and want to resort to that of a more centralized national government; those who on the other hand decry the centralization of the power of government in Washington and want broader state governments.

According to Mr. McDaniel, the change which the government is undergoing, that is, the shifting of more interests from the state to the federal government, is not so much by reason of the fact that states have been designedly shorn of their power but that the minds of the people's have been, for many reasons, turned from the states to the national government.

The population increase, the broadening of trade and commerce, the increased wealth of the country, have overstepped state bounds and obliterated state lines and broadened the score and functions of the government.

Mr. McDaniel pointed out no particular dangers or advantages in the changes that have been wrought in our government, pointing out that his purpose was not so much to propound theories as to present a spectacle—that of the growth of the national government to its present vast proportions and world prominence from small beginnings and obscurity.

He devoted the greater part of his discussion to the constitution and its various amendments, explaining his discussion to the constitution and its various amendments, explaining the cause and significance of each. He stated that our system of government, its growth and changes, has been marred here and there as unskilled and unfit hands at times wrought in its fashioning, but granting its imperfections the system, desire its fulls are recents the most age.

What you'll find will be a revelation. Without side-sway or alipping or wandering . . . the car fairly hugs the road. You enjoy a surprising feeling of stable equilibrium—its performance will thrill you to the finger tips.

You surely owe it to yourself to find out what this Overland Six offers before buying any car today.

A new departure in motor car engineering

This car has tremendous power—performance ability never obtainable in any car of this size or price before. Full 40-brake horsepower is delivered in a straight line from its low-swung engine through to the rear-axle shaft. The result is a traffic ability that is positively amazing.

It took 2 years to design and build the Overland Six. And in addition 12 months to test it. We doubt if any car ever built received more careful study from the engineer-

It embodies the major advantages of 18 of Europe and America's finest motor cars plus many others our own engineering experts developed.

The Overland Six will turn in a forty foot circle. Rear springs are underslung and 52 inches long. 141 square inches of braking surface provide an ample safety margin. It has more inside space. More cubic feet than the average car of this price.

The result is ample comfort for 5 full-size passengers . . . with plenty of room to step in or out . . . room to stretch your legs with the utmost case.

The seats are wider, the windows larger, the doors much broader. All features you'll certainly appreciate when you inspect rival cars of this price.

Under ordinary production standards this Overland Six Sedan could not be sold within $300 to $400 of its price. Yet, because of the tremendous purchasing power and production facilities of the great Willys-Overland organization, it now sells for only $935 f. o. b. factory. To spend more is extravagance. To pay less means a

The recent purchase calls for an expenditure of approximately $2,-450,000 and embraces the acquisition of the following units: Twenty-four heavy Mikado class J-4 freight locomotives purchased from the American Locomotive company; 8 mountain type class L-1 passenger locomotives, purchased from the Baldwin Locomotive Works; 10 70-foot straight haggage cars, purchased from the Pressed Steef Car company; 15 70-foot combination baggage and mail cars, purchased from the American Car & Foundry company; 50 cabooses to be constructed in the South Louisville shops.

Delivery of the freight locomotives will begin and be completed during September of the current year. Passenger locomotives will be delivered early in October and the entire lot of passenger cars will be completed and delivered before December 1, 1926, This new order, added to the equipment purchases heretofore made during $8,700,000, makes a grand total for new equipment for the year 1926 amounting to $11,150,000 covering 48 freight locomotives, 16 passenger locomotives, 20 standard baggage cars, 4 three-door horse baggage cars, 19 baggage and mail cars, 2 standard postal cars, 2 combination baggage car and total for new equipment the L. & N. has authorized and spent during the first four months of the current year a total of $17,555,000 for the construction and improvement of various roadway facilities, including the acquisition of 70,000 tons of new rail for maintenance and new construction work. These impressive figures make a grand total of actual expenditures and outstanding authorities so far during 1926, of $28,705,000, it is pointed out.

THE LAKE TRAGEDIES.

If the various swimming pools I the city, all under the direction and regulation of the park board, cannot be made safe for the thousands of young people who are invited to use them, then they should be closed. SECRETARY HOOVER.

The people of Georgia as a whole Join with the University faculty, trustees, alumni and the Athens citizens in extending a cordial welcome to Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, who delivers the baccalaureate address at the University commencement exercises today.

His department, and his activities, are perhaps more divorced from politics than any other of the cabinet portfolios-and for that reason lit is in closer touch with all the people.

It is to be regretted that Secretary Hoover cannot find the time to visit Atlanta and other Georgia cities, and agricultural and industrial sections. He would find many of the situations standardized, as he has so urgently sought, especially in Industrial labor. He should see for himself the great natural resources of Georgia-the marble of north Georgia, the ceramic clays, the minerals, the great power developments. He is, however, a close observer and a good listener. He will know a great deal more about Georgia after his visit to Athens today.

This reconstruction has meant work, and foresight, and confidence on the part of men who have been willing to demonstrate their faith by taking a chance on the outcome of their ventures. It is only within the past two year that publishing has asserted itself as a strong developing factor in outhern business.

And why not? The south is logically the literary center of the United States because it is the land of romance and of beauty, and because its traditions are founded upon much of tragedy and pathos.

For the past 15 years he has had harge of some 60,000 acres of hardwood timber lands in Towns and Union counties, in the heart of the Georgia mountains.

His interest in good roads is well known, having organized the Union County Good Roads association in 1915 and has been a prime mover in the Nacoochee-Hiawassee Road and Recreation association since 1922. Last year he was joint author of two gasoline tax laws which now brings about a half million dollars annually nto the state highway fund.

At the recent special session of th legislature, Mr. Stone was a leader for educational expansion and for state highway bonds, being secretary of the steering committee for the pro posed bond issues. His many friends at the capitol, and over the state, are urging him to run for reelection to the house of representatives and continue his unselfish service.

Union county has a large per cent republican vote, but the democrats there succeeded in electing a full ticket of county officers last year for the first time in the history of the county and will probably see the advantage of drafting Mr. Stone into service again and give him the nomination in the primary without opposi tion.

Why Auto Insurance Rates Are Higher in Atlanta

Editor Constitution :- Casualty companies write three forms of automobile coverage: Public liability, property damage and collision—the collision being further divided into full coverage, $50 deductible, and $100 deductible. The differentiation in rates varies first, as to the territory the car is principally used; second, by the type of car covered, and third, by classification.

For rate making purposes each state s divided into a number of territorial schedules which reflect the degree of congestion of traffic, the population n different communities, and the severity of the automobile hazard. The highest rated territory is New York and the lowest, the rural districts in the south and west.

How to reduce to a common denominator the transportation costs attaching to a bale of cotton billed fro livering the same bale to the mill door in Griffin or in Atlanta, will be some figuring, believe me!

I may be widely mistaken, but this movement to eliminate "sectional" in-cidents and "nationalize" the indus-try looks like a last resort of the eastern manufacturers to keep their skins on. The growing trend of the industry to the south is alarming to them and they cannot be blamed for seeking safety in a national pool.

They may find temporary relief by inducing southern mills to enter the proposed national textile trust, but the logic of nature, plus the logic of necessity, will finally assert their compulsions and the great bulk of the cotton textile industry will find its only profitable stabilization on south-ern soil.

Meantime in the senate office building across the capitol plaza, Senator Reed, of Missouri, and his campaign fund investigating committee was delving into the affairs of the camaign made by William S. Vare, who won the senatorial nomination, seeking data on which the senate could base an effort to prevent Vare from taking his seat in the next congress.

While no additions were made to the net total expenditures which have been repealed to the extent of nearly $2,000,000, Vare admitted on the stand that he had gone a security on a note for $100,000 signed by Albert M. Greenfield, a business man in Philadelphia, who later paid off the obligation. Vare's treasurer, Thomas F. Watson, became confused and made conflicting testimony regarding $25,000 cash in his safe, finally stating that he accumulated the money quietly because he did not want it known how much he was putting into the Vare campaign.

Reed has been much concerned over the fact that about half of the Vare funds, which total about $600,000, was handled in cash and never was banked or drawn by check. This was the money distributed among county leaders.

"I ordered this money handled in cash," explained Harry A. Mackey, Vare's campaign manager, "because the state of the cash and the complaining patrons by W. Agreeing with Secretary Mellon that large expenditures are unavoidable, Mackey condemned the Pennsylvania primary law as "un-American."

"It is the curse of Pennsylvania," he declared. "It is arranged so that a man can't run for office without wealth and a vast organization behind him."

Mackey, a hard-boiled politician given to picturesque rather than elegant language, regaled the committee with some of the inside story of Philadelphia politics.

"Four years ago when Senator Pepper was being fought by the Pittsburgh organization, they were the gang and we were the statesmen," Mackey said. "He came down to our headquarters and declared he was ready to 'spit in the bulldog's eye.' I was sbocked to hear such language and to think that such a scholarly man as Senator Pepper though the had to use that hind of language among men who were intelligent enough to understand any language he could use."

instead of for only nine as has been the custom.

All colored teachers of the county system were reelected at the board meeting for service during the next scholastic year. Only three of the negro teachers were rejected, this action being taken on the grounds that the grades of their certificates were not sufficiently high.

An effort by patrons of the Evan P. Howell school to oust Mrs. Fannie Nichols as principal of the institution proved futile and she was again chosen to head the school. Her election followed a hearing in the courtroom of Judge W. D. Ellis as to eligibility. A petition signed by 107 school patrons protested the reelection of Mrs. Nichols on the grounds of inefficiency and partiality and was filed approximately two weeks ago with the county board. Due to the petition, the teachers of the Evan P. Howell school were not elected when the other teachers of the school system were chosen.

Thirst and a taste for Coca-Cola are Delicious and Refreshing the same thing

> How Taste Satisfies Thirst

Thirst is a natural call for moisture. It is first registered in your palate. The sense of taste which resides there was not created only to be appeased, satisfied and delighted, but to tempt you to take what's good for you when it is good for you.

Three-fourths of you is moisture. Every move you make is using up the supply.

Because otherwise you would not drink enough to keep the moisture up to the health-level, your palate is teased and tempted.

The palate, holding recollection of flavors, is one of the most delicate sensibilities we have, and it never forgets what has especially delighted it.

Of all the hundreds of beverages offered the public which the human palate remembers, Coca-Cola is the one which has most definitely registered its taste with the public.

Atlanta is a Healthy City

THE CONSTITUTION, ATLANTA, GA., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, 19.

SUNSHINE, fresh air, care in the management of a few seeming details are the things which make a community healthy. Our startling health record in Atlanta traces back to these things.

The natural advantages of our mild climate which invites healthful exercise the whole year round helps every one of us to keep body in tune, muscles supple and mind alert. The cool pleasant breezes which sweep down from Georgia's rugged mountains among Atlanta's tree-bowered homes are health bringing breezes.

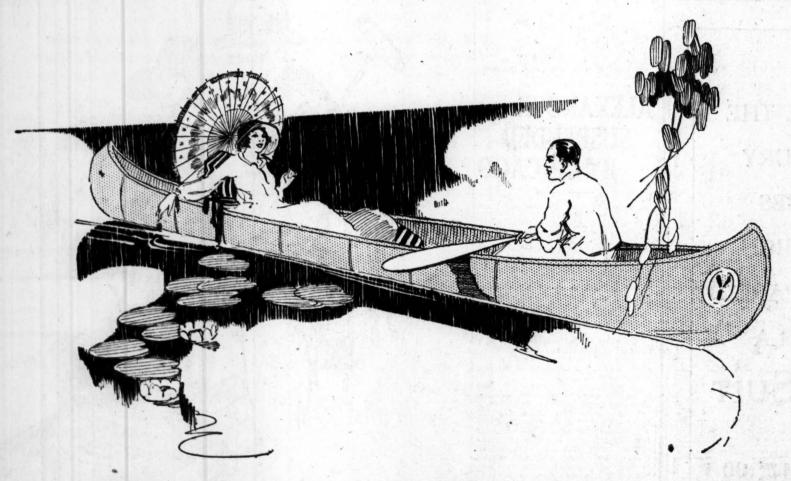

Pure water, the wide spread of our home sections, the absence of excessive crowding in even the poorest colored sections, the meticulous care with which the city meets every sanitary need, the natural drainage of Atlanta's "thousand hills" which prevents insect-breeding surface ponds are all factors in maintaining our health leadership.

Atlanta's splendid hospitals, the acknowledged leadership of Atlanta doctors---many of whom are internationally famous specialists---our medical and dental schools, the high character even of our prescription druggists, are factors. Georgia's death rate is consistently the lowest of any state east of the Mississippi river, Atlanta's is lower each year.

Hundreds of people are constantly employed in the city health and sanitary departments in preventive work. The streets are swept and washed daily, for cleanliness is the guarantee of health. Inspectors guard the food which we buy from grocer, meat market, restaurant and soda fountain. A trained veterinary passes on all meat slaughtered. Milk is tested. Bacteria tests are made.

Preventive work is carried into our splendid public schools by a staff of doctors, dentists and public health nurses, who not only build health for young Atlanta by drills in hygiene and by correcting any minor ailments as they occur, but by a thorough "health audit" once each year.

This positive fact of Atlanta Health is but another reason for the unbounded prosperity that is ours. Health, wealth and happiness, grouped together by the old toast, have found a natural affinity in our Atlanta, whose skyline is the most dominant in Dixie.

Bridal Party.

Miss Annella Higginbotham, of Elberton, Ga., sister of the groom, and Miss Annie Louise Dunn, sister of the bride, acting as bridesmaids, were the first to enter. Miss Higginbotham wore blue taffeta and Miss Dunn wore peach taffeta.

The gowns were fashioned alike. The full bouffant skirts were scalloped at the bottom and faced with contrasting colors. The two front scallops were caught back with handmade flowers and formed an uneven hem line. The bodices were made along old-fashioned lines with low V-shaped necks back and front, faced with contrasting color. Streamers of double-faced taffeta extended from the center of the neck in back to the hem line. The bridesmaids carried arm bouquets of vari-colored gladioli with satin bows.

Next to enter were Mrs. Alfred Loftin Oclin, Jr., sister of the bride, who was matron of honor. She was gowned in orchid georgette over satin, fashioned with a long-waisted bodice, and full skirt, the back extending to the ankles, giving the effect of the uneven hem line. The bodice and hem were edged with narrow pink satin ribbons. Wide ribbon of the same shade formed a rolled collar and continued to the center front of the bodice and tied with a graceful bow knot. Mrs. Oclin carried an arm bouquet of vari-colored gladioli tied with pink ribbon.

The maid of honor, Miss Melba Chenning, entered alone. Her gown was of pale green taffeta fashioned along the same lines of the bridesmaids. Her flowers were an arm bouquet of gladioli aloo.

Master Henry Dunn, Jr., young nephew of the bride, acted as ring-bearer. He wore a little white satin to attend.

posal for a plebiscite in the disputed territory apparently has been vetoed by Chile's refusal to accept conditions regarded as fair by Peru and the United States and at the same time an alternative negotiation started by Secretary Kellogg is showing signs of lapsing without an agreement.

Crisis Reached.

The controversy over the plebiscite proposal reached its crisis when the American Peruvian-Chilean commission sitting at Arica decided by majority vote that Chile had made a fair election impossible, and there were indications here today that no appeal to Washington on that subject would avail. Officials would not discuss the situation today, but they manifestly are about convinced that further discussions at Arica would be a waste of time. Helen Stenman, a maid, discovered the lifeless body of Mrs. Vilas hanging in a clothes closet. The panicstricken girl telephoned relatives and the family attorneys and an undertaker notified the coroner and the police. Mrs. Vilas was one of the most prominent young matrons in Chicago. She is the mother of a son, now 20, and a daughter, aged 17. Her husband was notified of the tragedy. No reason has yet been assigned for her act.

Royal C. Vilas, the ex-husband, is prominent in Chicago business and club life. He is president of the Pyle-National company, succeeding his father in that office.

Mrs. Vilas, who was 40 year old, sued her husband for divorce in 1921, charging him with infidelity, and naming a Mrs. R. C. Vance as corespondent. The decree was signed in the same year and under its terms she was awarded $15,000 alimony, $5,000 a year for the support of the two children, a life insurance policy for $150,000 and a substantial block of stock in the Pyle-National company.

The Howard.

Unlike most of its predecessors in the series of Publix presentations at the greater Howard theater, this week's John Murray Anderson production, "The Fountain of Gold," tells a story, well connected from beginning to end. The theme of this rewse, which is replete with sensational dancing and striking light effects, is the legend of Ponce de Leon and his search for the Fountain of Eternal Youth. "Red Dice," headliner of the screen program at the Rialto theater this week, stars Rod LaRoque and Marguerite de la Motte and the supporting cast includes Ray Hallor, George von Seyffertitz, George Cooper, Walter Long, Edythe York and others.

It is a story of the rum-running industry, in which the hero sells his life for $300 cash, only to fall in love and regret the bargain extremely. It is from the story which Octavus Roy Cohen wrote under the title of "The Iron Chalice." Jeanie MacPherson wrote the scenario.

At the Forsyth.

Continuing the success of Monday night Don Lanning and his Forsyth Players under direction of James E. Eviston and Walter C. Van Brunt are apparently on their way toward creating a new record for the Forsyth theater this week in "Very Good Eddie," that snappy and hilarious musical comedy that combines tunefulness with comedy. The splendid company is given a great opportunity to register in this production and each one of the principals has successfully made a bid for popularity in one or more of the beautiful song numbers. Lanning and Miss Ruth Tester singing "Babes in the Wood" is an outstanding example.

The production preserves to a surprising degree the funny story of the piece which is concerned with a tangle of comic situations occurring on a trip up the Hudson. At the same time a great many fine specialties have been put into the hour and twenty minutes performance. There will be a matinee on Thursday and another on Saturday.

INSTALLMENT XXXIII A MEETING IS ARRANGED.

The telephone rang. Mr. Leslie handed the receiver to John.

"Mr. Furneaux wants a word with you," he explained. The detective came to the point with his usual Jerky directness.

"Free this evening, Mr. Panton?" he inquired. "Yes. That is to say, I had planned a long walk with Spot, and beleated meal somewhere up the Thames valley." "Sorry to disappoint Spot. Tell him I'll forward a young rabbit, nicely skinned. I want you to come slumming with me. You will probably meet Connington."

John had grown sensitive these days. He shrank away from the phone as though its mere physical contact was disagreeable.

"Is that really necessary?" he said.

"Well-I think so. Wear your oldest lounge suit. And bring Spot. That intelligent hound should be introduced to the burrows of Soho." "Are you serious?"

"I am never otherwise. It's awful to go through life being misunderstood, but that seems to be my lot. To prevent anything of the sort marring a pleasant evening, let me make clear that you and Spot are invited to dine with Winter and me and another of our men named Sheldon at the Ristorante Milano in Dean street, kept by one Vittorio Pucci. Eight o'clock sharp, first floor, first door. If there is any festivity at Wimbledon you can promise to be home by ten-thirty." "Of course, I shall be glad to dine with you-

"But you're half-hearted about the other fixture. Why not? Still, it may be helpful, and kindly remember that we're doing things for you which might lead to a departmental row if they get known higher up." "Sorry. I am not unmindful of that aspect of the business 1-

"Yes. Don't say it! If we pull off anything worth while I'll tell you Winter's favorite brand of cigars. I'll not let you off so cheaply. I've had my eye for months on a half dozen of 1815 brandy—one of the last consignments in the market of a genuine corpse reviver. A single tot would make Tutankhamen sit up in his gold coffin and take notice." Nevertheless, John sighed as he replaced the instrument.

"I'm an ungrateful blighter," he said. "Every one wants to be kind, and I stall them off."

"Not quite so bad as all that," said Leslie. 'Make up your mind to turn over control to me for a month, and you'll be surprised to find how the tangle will unravel itself. What did Furneaux want? . . . Ah, that may be quite important," he went on when John had explained. "I have known the little man many years, and cannot recall one absolute fall-ure when he followed any case in dead earnest. He has some extraordinary theory, based on telepathy, I suppose, that when two people vitally bound up in some mystery get together some magnetic subconscious current comes into play between them, and it affects him. Of course, as a hard-headed Scot, I scoff at such nonsence, yet if I had wronged you and Furneaux got us together in the same room I should be worried, afraid of making some slip, needlessly careful of what I said or how I acted. Therein, perhaps, lies the true explanation of his almost uncanny guessing, for it can be nothing else."

Some one knocked on the door.

"May I come in?" cried May Leslie's voice.

"No," said her uncle.

The door opened, and the girl popped her head inside.

"Just one sec'," she bubbled. "Arthur is here, John, and wants to know if you will make up a four for Hurlingham tomorrow. It will be a rather good knock—Indians vs. Argentines." 'It's the last thing I would dream of doing," was the ungracious answer.

"So I said, and auntie doesn't care for polo—it frightens her. So Arthur is taking little me. I just invited you so as to stop you from being peeved because you were dropped for the afternoon." "I asked for that, and got it," was John's comment when the door

"Frensham strikes me as quite a nice young fellow," said Leslie, indulging in his favorite trick of saying something apparently not bearing dulging in his favorite trick of saying something apparently not bearing on the point at issue.

"One of the best," agreed John, heartily. "He seems to have cottoned onto your niece. If they make a match of it they will be an ideal pair. May will put just the right amount of pep into Arthur."

Leslie nodded. He had not expected so direct a challenge. He wondered what May herself would have said had she heard.

"You may be right," he said. "Of course, you must have acquired some knowledge of the ways of Canadian girls, but I don't think you are a Salomon when it comes to understanding the familians compared. a Solomon when it comes to understanding the feminine complex. May has been here now three consecutive summers, and has given what she calls the 'once over' to scores of young men, but I haven't noticed that she is eating her heart out in secret sorrow."

John felt he had been snubbed effectually. He did not care. The prospect of meeting Connington had soured him for the day. Indeed, the notion had occurred to him that May Leslie would listen if he began to whisper in her ear, but it was obviously impossible that he should marry any nice girl while he was under the cloud which threatened to darken his whole life. It was exactly this nebulous belief, or half impression, which had begun to soften his harsh judgment of Alistair. If his own blackened character were the real bar, wherein did Eileen differ from May, or either from any other woman? His father was right. The mere idea was "preposterous" in itself. He passed Lord Oban's letter across the table, and rose.

"Answer that as you think fit, sir," he said. "I'll obey orders, never Leslie, left alone, busied himself at once in drafting a reply.

It did not take him long. Writing noncommittal words had made up a large part of his business career. Yet, when the text was to his liking, he did not hurry off to the city but sat for some minutes in deep thought. And it is probable, if his thoughts had been given utterance to, they would have taken some such form as this:

"When a proud man has been crushed by an almost intolerable disgrace she seldom or never recaptures the joy of life. Some heedless natures would become convinced of their own innocence, and, having washed clean the slate for themselves, would assume the same leniency washed clean the slate for themselves, would assume the same leniency from all the world. But such people were never really proud in spirit. John is different. He cannot ever be brought to hope that his lost honor may be retrieved. If it is—and I see a fair prospect of ultimate success in the pending investigation—what will be the outcome? There I am wholly at sea. The one thing I do know is that Miss May Leslie must be content with a baronetcy, if she can get it, instead of a barony. At any rate, John is a good lad, and worth saving, and, if I can help it, he will neither break the entail nor give any fantastic pledge of celibacy in favor of the Inverlochtie gang." in favor of the Inverlochtie gang.'

So Mr. Leslie was not only rather annoyed by Alistair's maneuver-ing but more than a trifle hard on Eileen if she were included in the comprehensive discourtesy of the word "gang."

PRIMARY AMENDMENT URGED BY ROBINSON

Bristol, Va., June 15.—A constitu-tional amendment providing extension of the corrupt practices act to primary elections is advanced as a remedy for such conditions as have been disclosed in Pennsyylvania by Senator Robin-son, of Arkansas, democratic floor leader.

Denouncing the vast expenditures a district democratic convention, Robinson made it plain that the democratic party will seize that situation as an issue in the fall campaign. He outlined as other issues the alleged domination of the republican party by "rapacious big business," the "moral breakdown" of the administration under Harding and Coolidge, the tariff, and farm relief.

It is inferred from his speech that the democratic party probably will initiate a move for the amendment he suggests. Robinson seemed to take it for granted that efforts will be made to oust Representative Vare, if he is named for the senate in the fall election.

The democratic leader smid that the Newberry case "provoked nationwide disgust and resentment," and that "the recent Pennsylvania primaries convert the Newberry episode into a trifle."

"The whole story will never be told. Factious schemes, conspiracies against the public interest by those who regard the control of government as a legitimate method of securing privileges and profits for individuals and corporations, will remain undisclosed."

The middlewestern metropolis has received its law enforcement in many curious ways, but this was the first time the war on crime has been directed from the hoozegow of an adjoining county. It was also the first time that the chief law enforcement officer of the city ever carried on in that capacity while a prisoner.

JOHN F. CLARK & CO. New York, June 15.—With weather conditions generally beneficial to the crop, except in a few certain localities, it was quite natural to see the market again decline. Altogether, it was generally anticipated that the market was due for a rally, owing to the rather heavy liquidation of last week. No rally developed in view of the fact that the better weather report overcame any tendency along the lines. The feeling continues rather bearish, with the general belief that the market will work there and is now making an effort to discount a good government report on July 2. The cotton that is being sold, however, is passing into very strong hands, the principal buyers. The market is unquestionably short, and it is not at all unreasonable to expect the weather to change somewhat in the next few days, as the south has experienced a very good spell of weather which enabled them to catch up with some lateness of the crop.

Many people taking a constructive viewpoint of the stock market are of the opinion that after the sustained price advance of the last week, the market would be in a much stronger technical position if it had a reaction of a couple of points or even more. Such leading stocks as Steel common and General Motors were subjected again today to a very heavy profit taking, but again good buying developed in these shares. As long as leading stocks remain so strong it is not surprising that the desired reaction in the market as a whole does not come.

Rumors were again heard of oil mergers such as Atlantic Refining and Marland with Gulf Refining to take over Producers and Refiners. There may be something to these merger rumors. But without them the oil shares are entitled to advance in a strong market merely on their very large current earnings and very strong financial position built on recent large earnings.

Stories were widely circulated throughout Wall street today to the effect that General Motors directors would at next month's meeting declare a stock dividend of 20 or 25 per cent. In increasing its regular dividend and in declaring extra dividends, General Motors within the last year has been very generous with its share bellers.

In concluding her address to the group of women Tuesday, Mrs. Andrews explained that she "merely wished to give an accounting of my life's activities, so that workers and others interested in the reform move might know that I have spent my life in useful, uplifting work and that I hope to continue that same course with the help of others."

All her life, she said, had been spent in teaching and studying and serving humanity, and "now I am advertised as one subject to arrest."

Mrs. Andrews enferred to "veiled threats that we women will be arrested if we continue our efforts to clean up the city," declaring that "we have broken no laws, therefore, are not subject to arrest."

"Nor am I, or other reform workers, subjects for bona fide damage suits," she concluded. "It is all a smoke screen to hide the real issue, and we will 'carry on' our policy of calling the public's attention to glaring inefficiency in police and other circles with the hope that sufficient sentiment will be aroused to influence the fullest enforcement of laws of the land."
